ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I am grateful to the members of the Iskender Pasha community in several cities for their openness in allowing me to be among them for extended periods of time, and to my teachers Stefania Pandolfo, Hamid Algar, Michael Meeker, Aihwa Ong, Paul Rabinow, and Ayla Algar. Thanks also to İsmail Kara, who has been most generous with his erudition over the years, and Vince Pecora, who let me try out parts of my arguments in various knowledgeable venues. Numerous people and institutions were instrumental in the research and writing, and it is with pleasure that I thank them here: the İslam Araştırmaları Merkezi in Istanbul, particularly Recep Şentürk, Semih Ceyhan, Sema Doğan, and librarian Selahattin Öztürk; and the Bilim ve Sanat Vakfı and Nurullah Ardiç. Nazif Gürdoğan and Erol Kılıç helped get me started early on. Martin van Bruinessen, Julia Day Howell, Bruce Grant, Esra Özyürek, Yaseen Noorani, Ana Alonso, Jane Hill, Paul Eiss, Şerif Mardin, and Yael Navaro-Yashin all gave helpful comments on parts or early versions of the manuscript. For helpful assistance along the way I also thank Dick Eaton, Steve Lansing, Tad Park, Anne Betteridge, Ahmet Guida, Christine Szuter, Tom Sheridan, Ellen Basso, Dani Triadan, Dave Thompsen (University of Arizona College of Social and Behavioral Sciences Tech and image scanner extraordinaire), and Hikmet Kocamaner for his assistance and Aslı I siz for her comments as the project drew to a close.

Funding for the project at various stages came from a Fulbright Institute for International Education student fellowship, the Center for Middle Eastern Studies at University of California at Berkeley, the Institute for Turkish Studies in Washington DC, and a Fulbright-Hays Faculty Research Abroad fellowship. I am grateful for the friendly assistance of the directors and staff of the Fulbright offices in Istanbul and Ankara. Thanks also to Ali Çarkoğlu and Dean Ahmet Alkan at Sabancı University in Istanbul for their generosity and hospitality during writing.

It is a pleasure for me to make a special note of gratitude to my colleagues and friends at the University of Arizona, and especially the School of Anthropology, for the exemplary collegiality and generosity they have shown me. I feel fortunate to be able to work in such an extraordinary environment. I am also glad for the stimulating engagement of colleagues in the Department of Near Eastern Studies and at the Center for Middle Eastern Studies at the University of Arizona.

Finally, I am fortunate to have the wonderful support and companionship of my wife, Özlem; my parents, Raymond and Karen; my brother, Roger, and my in-laws, Ergun and Aslı Özgür, in Istanbul; and Chris Gutkind in London. This study could not have been done without them.
