

The Word of a Woman?

Also by Jan Jordan

WORKING GIRLS: Women in the New Zealand Sex Industry

The Word of a Woman?

Police, Rape and Belief

Jan Jordan

Institute of Criminology

Victoria University of Wellington, New Zealand

© Jan Jordan 2004

Softcover reprint of the hardcover 1st edition 2004 978-1-4039-2169-7

All rights reserved. No reproduction, copy or transmission of this publication may be made without written permission.

No paragraph of this publication may be reproduced, copied or transmitted save with written permission or in accordance with the provisions of the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988, or under the terms of any licence permitting limited copying issued by the Copyright Licensing Agency, 90 Tottenham Court Road, London W1T 4LP.

Any person who does any unauthorized act in relation to this publication may be liable to criminal prosecution and civil claims for damages.

The author has asserted her right to be identified as the author of this work in accordance with the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

First published 2004 by
PALGRAVE MACMILLAN
Houndmills, Basingstoke, Hampshire RG21 6XS and
175 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10010
Companies and representatives throughout the world

PALGRAVE MACMILLAN is the global academic imprint of the Palgrave Macmillan division of St. Martin's Press, LLC and of Palgrave Macmillan Ltd. Macmillan® is a registered trademark in the United States, United Kingdom and other countries. Palgrave is a registered trademark in the European Union and other countries.

ISBN 978-1-349-51552-3 ISBN 978-0-230-51105-7 (eBook)
DOI 10.1057/9780230511057

This book is printed on paper suitable for recycling and made from fully managed and sustained forest sources.

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data
Jordan, Jan, 1954—

The word of a woman? : police, rape, and belief / Jan Jordan.
p. cm.

Includes bibliographical references and index.

1. Rape – Investigation – New Zealand.
2. Police questioning – New Zealand.
3. Rape victims – New Zealand. I. Title.

HV8079.R35J67 2004
363.25'9532'0993—dc22

2004047836

10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1
13 12 11 10 09 08 07 06 05 04

The range of what we think and do is limited by what we fail to notice.
And because we fail to notice
that we fail to notice
there is little we can do
to change
until we notice
how failing to notice
shapes our thoughts and deeds.

(R. D. Laing, 1970)

Thanks to Taylor and Francis for copyright permission to reprint this extract from Laing, R. D. (1970), Knots, London: Tavistock Publications.

This page intentionally left blank

Contents

List of Tables	viii
Acknowledgements	ix
1 Introduction: The Credibility Conundrum	1
2 'She stings while she delights': Rape Definitions and Representations	14
3 'Have you really been raped?' Criminal Justice System Responses	49
4 Beyond Belief: Police Files on Rape	89
5 Having 'a nose for it': How Investigators Investigate	137
6 Perfect Victims/Perfect Policing? In the Words of the Women	177
7 'Getting it right': Reviewing Police Responses to Rape	215
8 Conclusion: True 'lies' and 'false' Truths	242
End Poem	249
Notes	250
References	255
Index	272

List of Tables

4.1	Selected sexual violation offences, reported, cleared and cleared by 'no offence disclosed' (NOD) for the year ended 30 June 1997	91
4.2	Victim attributions	96
6.1	Ages of the women at time of attack	180
6.2	Counts of indictment against Rewa	180

Acknowledgements

Acknowledging all those who helped to bring this book to completion is an impossible task. However, there are some whose particular or timely contributions deserve special mention.

First and foremost, I am indebted to my partner, Chris Wood, who has been a source of constant love, support, wisdom, patience and encouragement throughout this long venture, and always seemed to know when it was time to agitate and time to soothe.

Professor Allison Morris and Dr Jenny Neale each brought their particular strengths to the difficult task of guiding and overseeing the many stages of this research, and I am indebted to them both. Greatly appreciated also have been the comments and advice provided by Professor Liz Kelly, Professor Jeanne Gregory, and Dr Allison Kirkman, each of whom encouraged the preparation of this book. Their opinions I valued immensely, in part because their own writings so inspired.

As well as the above, Margie Barr-Brown and Carol Shand have each played an important 'coaching' role in keeping me on track with what often seemed a daunting venture – I am grateful to them both for believing something would eventually materialise! Guidance from my editor, Briar Towers, is also appreciated and my thanks to her and Jen Nelson for their professional advice and support from afar.

The impetus for this research arose from interviews conducted with women who had been raped or sexually assaulted, and I am truly indebted to all those women who had the courage to share their experiences and who did so in such a full and rich way. I particularly want to acknowledge here the women who were attacked by Malcolm Rewa, whose stories of survival were so compelling and whose honesty and openness touched me deeply.

Much of this research depended on the cooperation of the New Zealand Police, and I acknowledge and respect all those who approved, advised and participated in the studies presented here for their willingness to subject themselves and their organisation to such scrutiny. Some of those who assisted have since moved to other positions or left the Police, but contributed greatly at crucial stages of the research. In particular, I wish to thank staff from the Office of the Commissioner, members of the Offender Profiling Squad (Detective Sergeant Dave Henwood, Detective Russell Lamb and Detective Inspector Peter Mitford-Burgess); and Detective Senior Sergeant Mike Arnerich and Detective Sergeant Darrin Thompson, both from Wellington Central Police Station.

I wish to acknowledge also the support of my colleagues at the Institute of Criminology, and within the School of Social and Cultural Studies, especially Professor Philip Stenning for his encouragement and Lizzy Stanley for her careful reading and wise advice. The support of members of my Victoria University writing group has also been invaluable, and warm thanks is extended to Lise Bird, Deborah Jones, and Sara Kindon, as well as to friend and colleague Devon Polaschek.

I have appreciated the warmth, patience and encouragement of many good friends over the years, some of whom now know more about this topic than they probably ever wanted to! My thanks to all who shared in the project of creating this book by helping me at times to focus on it and, at other times, to not focus on it. Both were essential to its completion.

Grateful acknowledgement is made to the Faculty Research Committee of Victoria University of Wellington for contributing to the funding of this research. I also wish to thank the New Zealand Federation of Graduate Women for awarding me their Staff Professional Development Scholarship to contribute to the costs incurred in the transcribing of the many interview tapes. Thanks to Brenda Watson, Tracy Anderson, Marianna Churchward and Sandy Taylor for doing such a wonderful job with these tapes. Warm thanks is also extended to Sandy Taylor for all her secretarial support and professional input at various stages during the production of this book.

To all of you who have helped to bring this book into being – my warm and grateful thanks.