Acknowledgements

For consistent support and encouragement, I have to single out Holly Tessler, who has read and commented on chapters both ancient and modern.

For outstanding help: Mat Flynn and Keith Mullin.

I would like to thank all my students at the University of Liverpool, UK, in the MBA in music industries degree and then the MA in music industry studies. I have made great friends, and learned much that I formerly did not understand or appreciate as a result of years of lively debate with a stream of intelligent and dedicated people.

I would like to thank all the musicians, artist managers and music industry personnel who have shared their experiences with me. I made a pledge of anonymity to everyone, so I cannot thank you all by name, but I have tried faithfully to make sense of all that was said to me and all the reflection that our encounters encouraged.

I would like to thank colleagues past and present at the Institute of Popular Music, University of Liverpool, UK, and in the School of Music at the University of Liverpool, UK, notably Sara Cohen, Philip Tagg, David Horn, Marion Leonard, Rob Strachan, Anahid Kassabian, Hae-Kyung Um, Mike Brocken, Michael Spitzer, Nedim Hassan, Phil Kirby, Ellen Loudon and Emilia Barna. I would also like to thank other university colleagues who commented on drafts: Andrew Davies, Phil Davis, Paul Jones and Peter Goddard.

For good company and insights: Kate Smith, Jo Wright and Dave McTague.

Sheffield contingent: Josie Robson, Rinella Cere, Frank Wilkes, Adam Morris, John Ball and Frances Ball.

Nationally and internationally: for more music than you can shake a stick at – Andrew Beck; for close reading and insightful comments – James Wyllie, Simon Frith, Peter Bailey, Mark Pulman, Roger Smith, Karen Collins, Richard Ekins, Christoph Jacke and Byron Dueck.

For help and assistance: Paul Thompson, Lynne Segal and Marcus Russell.

Honourable mentions: David Loscos, Kelly Wood, Hwan-ho Choi, David Southworth and Ann Harrison.

Finally, thanks to Rosanna Brown, whose love, care, support and incredible patience have helped me to finish what I began a long time ago. Words are not enough.
