

Post-War Modernist Cinema and Philosophy

Post-War Modernist Cinema and Philosophy

Confronting Negativity and Time

Hamish Ford

University of Newcastle, Australia

palgrave
macmillan

© Hamish Ford 2012

Softcover reprint of the hardcover 1st edition 2012 978-0-230-36887-3

All rights reserved. No reproduction, copy or transmission of this publication may be made without written permission.

No portion of this publication may be reproduced, copied or transmitted save with written permission or in accordance with the provisions of the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988, or under the terms of any licence permitting limited copying issued by the Copyright Licensing Agency, Saffron House, 6–10 Kirby Street, London EC1N 8TS.

Any person who does any unauthorized act in relation to this publication may be liable to criminal prosecution and civil claims for damages.

The author has asserted his right to be identified as the author of this work in accordance with the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

First published 2012 by
PALGRAVE MACMILLAN

Palgrave Macmillan in the UK is an imprint of Macmillan Publishers Limited, registered in England, company number 785998, of Houndmills, Basingstoke, Hampshire RG21 6XS.

Palgrave Macmillan in the US is a division of St Martin's Press LLC, 175 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10010.

Palgrave Macmillan is the global academic imprint of the above companies and has companies and representatives throughout the world.

Palgrave® and Macmillan® are registered trademarks in the United States, the United Kingdom, Europe and other countries.

ISBN 978-1-349-35013-1

ISBN 978-1-137-28352-8 (eBook)

DOI 10.1057/9781137283528

This book is printed on paper suitable for recycling and made from fully managed and sustained forest sources. Logging, pulping and manufacturing processes are expected to conform to the environmental regulations of the country of origin.

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library.

A catalog record for this book is available from the Library of Congress.

10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1
21 20 19 18 17 16 15 14 13 12

For Imogen

Contents

Acknowledgements	ix
Introduction	1
Negativity rising, difficult time	3
Modernity – film – modernism	9
Hard reality, luminous ambiguity	18
Part I The Negative Impression
1 Cinema's Ontological Challenge	27
Radical visions of modernity	27
Bergman's interpersonal violence	38
Godard's impossible subjectivity	45
Stressing the negative	54
Touching the void	62
The reflexive charge of absence	67
Inscriptions of a world we don't believe in	74
2 Formal Violence	84
The impact of space-time confusion	84
Dissonance and fragmentation	91
Anguished authorship	102
Autonomous materiality	113
The violent, open image	119
Intertextual suffering	123
Gazing into negative space	132
Part II An Anxious Pause
3 Dangerous Temporalities	143
Controversies in time	144
Resnais' achronological shards	149
Antonioni's insidious durée	157
Cinema's 'essential' temporality	164
Advancing forms of time	173
Irrational intervals and indeterminacy	182
An ambivalent, impossible pause	187

4 The New World	201
Temporality's gaze	201
The underground event	210
Uncomfortably at home	216
An immanent, alien landscape	224
The eternal return of difference	228
Temporality and difficult thought	233
Creativity and impower	238
Conclusion	249
Notes	255
Works Cited	265
Index	275

Acknowledgements

This book is the culmination of scholarly endeavour covering many years. I would therefore like to acknowledge those who have supported and substantively engaged with my work during this time, both in Australia and further afield, directly or indirectly helping strengthen long-percolating arguments that reach their ultimate expression in Post-War Modernist Cinema and Philosophy. A very singular debt of gratitude is owed to George Kouvaros for his careful advice over a long period during which the book's central claims were first formulated in the context of a PhD thesis. I also thank in particular Havi Carel, Shohini Chaudhuri, Claire Colebrook, Patrick Crogan, Adrian Danks, James Donald, Dan Edwards, Tara Forrest, Keith Gallasch, Laleen Jayamanne, Michelle Langford, Andrew McGettigan, Anne Rutherford, Lisa Trahair, and Greg Tuck. Closer to home, I wish to acknowledge the academic and administrative staff in the School of Humanities and Social Science at the University of Newcastle for their welcoming collegiality and diverse assistance, with particular appreciation going to Rebecca Beirne, Marj Kibby, Trisha Pender and Ros Smith. I would also like to thank my current and former students across multiple Australian universities. More specifically, the book has benefited from feedback by my fellow panelists and audiences to papers exploring key material from Part I and Part II delivered respectively at the first two major UK Film-Philosophy events, held in Bristol (2008) and Liverpool (2009). In terms of research assistance, I would like to thank Fredrik Gustafsson and archive staff at the Ingmar Bergman Foundation and Giancarlo Concetti of the Biblioteca Luigi Chiarini at the Centro Sperimentale di Cinematografia for making my visits to Stockholm and Rome so valuable and stimulating. Primarily involving research and translation work for forthcoming projects, both trips immeasurably strengthened the book's contextual and filmic detailing. Going right back to this project's beginnings, I owe a major debt of gratitude to Charles Silver and his friendly team at the Museum of Modern Art library and screening facilities in New York for enabling me to enjoy a long and immensely productive period many years ago, looking at archive prints and leafing through old articles and clippings – research that proved crucial to the final outcome. At the other end of the journey, at Palgrave Macmillan, I warmly thank commissioning editor Felicity Plester for committing to the book and for her patience, Catherine Mitchell, and the anonymous readers for helpful suggestions. My appreciation also goes to Sumitha Nithyanandan and the copy-editing team for all their work. Finally, I thank my parents and, above all, Elisabeth Powell for unswerving support.

Some material in the Introduction and Chapter 1 was originally published as part of 'Broken Glass by the Road: Adorno and a Cinema of Negativity' in (Havi Carel and Greg Tuck eds.) New Takes in Film and Philosophy (2011, pp. 65–85). Select elements of the Introduction and Conclusion first appeared within 'The Return of 1960s Modernist Cinema', Studies in Australasian Cinema (Volume 5, Number 2, 2011, pp. 155–170). The Introduction plus chapters 1 and 3 contain some brief passages of philosophical explication that first appeared as part of 'Difficult Relations: Film Studies and Continental Philosophy' in (James Donald and Michael Renov eds.) The Sage Handbook of Film Studies (2008, pp. 164–179). Some ideas developed throughout Part II were given very skeletal early expression in 'Antonioni's L'avventura and Deleuze's Time-Image', Senses of Cinema (Issue 27, July–August 2003). I thank the publishers of these works for their kind permission to incorporate this earlier research in Post-War Modernist Cinema and Philosophy: Confronting Negativity and Time.