

Understanding Governance series

General Editor: R.A.W. Rhodes, Professor of Government, University of Tasmania, and Distinguished Professor of Political Science, Australian National University

Understanding Governance encompasses all theoretical approaches to the study of government and governance in advanced industrial democracies. It has three long-standing objectives:

1. To understand the process of change;
2. To develop theory to explain why change occurs; and
3. To set this change and its causes in comparative perspective.

The series includes titles that adopt post-structural and post-modern approaches to political science and challenge such notions as hollowing-out, governance, core executives, policy networks and the new institutionalism. It also publishes material with traditional institutional and historical approaches to such topics as prime ministers, ministers, the civil service and government departments. All titles not only meet the conventional standard of theoretical and empirical rigour but also seek to address topics of broad current interest that open the field of study to new ideas and areas of investigation.

Titles include:

Michael Rush and Philip Giddings
PARLIAMENTARY SOCIALISATION
Learning the Ropes or Determining Behaviour?

The research reported in this book was supported by the UK Economic and Social Research Council (ESRC) under Research Award RES-000-23-1295 'Democratic anchorage of governance networks in European countries'. The Q study would not have been possible without the assistance of a number of colleagues. Our thanks to Steven R. Brown, Kent State University, US, and Simon Watts, Nottingham Trent University, UK, for invaluable advice on Q methodological issues; Erik-Hans Klijn, Erasmus University, the Netherlands; Eva Sørensen, Roskilde University, Denmark; and Carsten Greve, Copenhagen Business School, Denmark, for supporting workshops and surveying of their masters students as well as advice and feedback on draft papers; and Christian Hackert for permitting us to utilise his Q Sort software.

In addition, a large number of colleagues gave us advice, support and comments on papers, including Stephen Griggs, Jenny Lewis, Tatum Matharu, Filip de Rynck, Jacob Torfing and Joris Voets. Papers on the research were given at the Interpretive Policy Analysis Conference, the European Group on Public Administration Conference, the International Research Society on Public Management Conference, the Public Management Research Association Conference and the Political Studies Association Conference, and at seminars at various universities, including Birmingham, Leuven, Melbourne, Roskilde and Zurich.

The study also benefited from the invaluable research support, at various times, of Navdeep Mathur (now at the Indian Institute of Management, Ahmedabad) and Michael Farrelly (now at the University of Hull, UK).

We thank Wiley-Blackwell and the editors of Public Administration for permission to draw on two articles: S. Jeffares and C. Skelcher (2011) 'Democratic subjectivities in network governance: a Q methodology study of Dutch and English public managers', Public Administration, 89 (4): 1253–1273 in Chapter 5 and V. Lowndes and H. Sullivan (2008) 'How low can you go? Rationales and challenges for neighbourhood governance', Public Administration, 86 (1): 53–74 in Chapter 7.
