At Palgrave, I am grateful to Nicola Viinikka Amanda Watkins, Kerry Coutts, Jo North and Guy Edwards, for their very helpful editorial assistance. In the Department of Politics, University of Durham, I would like to thank my PhD supervisor, Professor Robert Williams. He has been a wonderful mentor, and I will be forever grateful for both his advice and his support throughout the production of this work. I am also thankful for the gracious assistance of Dr Mark Aspinwall, Dr Anna Dickson, Dr Dale Mineshima, Dr Michael Macaulay, Wendy Redhead, Jean Richardson and Dr Steve Welch. I would also like to thank Professor Richard Batley, IDD, University of Birmingham, for giving me the quiet time to complete this book. I would also like to thank an anonymous reviewer for their very helpful suggestions.

I have gratefully received funding for this project from the Overseas Research Scheme (ORS), the British International Studies Association (BISA), the University of Durham Dean's Fund, the Department of Politics, and the Department for International Development (DfID), through a project on anti-corruption strategies chaired by Professor Alan Doig and Professor Robert Williams. I was able to present findings from my thesis at the 10th International Anti-Corruption Conference in October 2001 thanks to financial support from Transparency International.

I must also thank all of the people who set aside time from their very busy schedules for interviews and follow-up correspondence. I will not mention by name the many kind people at the World Bank, and they are mentioned in the text as 'World Bank (senior) staff member'; however, I am very grateful for their assistance. In addition, a number of people took the time to send me information: Fiona Simpkins, World Bank Institute; Dr Jon Moran, Senior Researcher on the DfID anti-corruption project; Aileen Marshall, Global Coalition for Africa; Phil Mason, DfID; Pauline Tamesis, UNDP; Eric Kite, USAID; Richard Thornburgh, Kirkpatrick & Lockhart LLP; Dr Herb Werlin; Professor Susan Rose-Ackerman, Yale University; Patrick Meagher, IRIS; Jane Covey, NGO Working Group on the World Bank; Transparency International – UK and Berlin; Professor Morris Szeftel, University of Leeds; Alex Wilks, Bretton Woods Project; Centre for Development Research, Copenhagen; Irène Hors, OECD; International Institute for Democracy and Electoral Assistance, Stockholm; Oliver Burki, SDC; Ministry for Foreign Affairs, The Netherlands; NORAD; DANIDA; SIDA; DIDC; Irish Aid; Dr Graham Harrison, University of Sheffield; and Masako Ollivier, Tulane Institute for International Development. Thank you also to Dr Kate Weaver and Dr Christopher Kilby for allowing me to cite from unpublished papers.

Finally, I would like to thank my family and friends for their love and support: Skip and Sheila Marquette, Cecilia Mainville, Dr Louise Soldani, Joe Marquette, Dan Marquette, Tobias Marquette, Lily Marquette, Peter and Kate Naylor, Renée Torr, Dr Anné-Sophie Darlington and Dr James McConnel. Lily also typed up my interview tapes, a job I wouldn't wish upon my worst enemy, let alone my best friend. Last but not least, I would like to thank my husband, Dr John Naylor, who has been here every step of the way.
